

Susan Bradnam is an award winning photojournalist who has worked as a photographer for various Canadian Daily Newspapers, The Kitchener Waterloo Record, The Toronto Star and The London Free Press, where she worked for 24 years, the last twelve as Chief Photographer. Between newspapers, Susan was a stringer for National Geographic for five years and her work appeared in their Children's Magazine "World" and their speciality children's book series. Susan was named Photojournalist of the Year in 1999 by the Canadian Association of Journalists for her work "Healing in Honduras." She left the newspaper business in 2010 to pursue a career in Free Lance Photography and in 2012 she was awarded an Honorable Mention in the International Garden Photographer of The Year Competition, presented by Kew Royal Botanical Gardens in London England. Susan has lectured at various colleges and Universities on Photojournalism and Ethics in Photojournalism. She lives in London with her husband Jon, and has three married sons and six, soon to be seven grandchildren.

S U E B R A D N A M

P H O T O G R A P H Y

